

StratusGroup, Inc. has and continues to demonstrate our commitment to sustainability through many environmental initiatives. The company has already done much toward achieving our goal of being LEED certified. Our efforts and successes are a reflection of our high-minded culture. We hope to provide leadership and positive financial results for Stratus and its customers through reduced packaging and other converting efficiencies. We offer the following examples of our already-achieved and/or ongoing initiatives:

- Recycle a minimum annual 660 gals of chemicals from our plate making process.
- Recycled 2,199,596 lbs of paper.
- Recycle shrink wrap and metal bands.
- Completed re-lamping program with 97 low energy fixtures.
- Replaced 20 computer terminals with energy efficient Energy Star terminals.
- Added motion sensors plant wide to reduce daily energy consumption.
- Purchased design software and human resources to assist in carton design projects that will use less paperboard for added carton projects.
- Provided training and software to assist office personnel in reducing paper usage in our daily operations.
- Changed to local suppliers when possible to reduce the use of fossil fuels and emissions in transportation.
- Stratus is partnering with several printing companies in a projected program to convert liner paper and pressure sensitive waste materials into energy pellets. This project will divert waste from landfills and all pellets used will replace the use of coal at our energy plants.

Sustainability is about everything that goes into your brand and doesn't stop at Stratus. That's why we develop relationships further up the supply chain with raw material and transportation providers. Below is a list of suppliers we actively work with to ensure sustainable innovation at every touch-point. These companies make sustainability an integral part of their daily business goals:

In short, StratusGroup is proud of the company we keep. We are committed to reducing packaging, recycling and revenue cost savings to make your business successful and our world a better place.
